The Boston team made its first appearance of the season in Washington yesterday and was greeted by a big audience, fully 4,000 spectators seeing the Senators walk away with the game by the score of 9 to 4. William Carrick was again on the rubber for the Washington club, and while ne was hit fairly hard, he kept the bingles so well scattered that but four runs crossed the plate. His support was not of the best, but he got into the error column himself and O'Brien and Clingman also made misplays. It was at the bat that the Senators shone with unusual brilliancy. They did all their hitting in three innings, bunching their bingles in such a way that runs were sent over the plate in luscious bunches. Dungan was the most effective with the stick, while Quinn, Everett and O'Brien also hit timely, the latter getting in an effective sacrifice in the first inning. The Boston team had three well-known ex-Senators on the field yesterday afternoon and each was given a hearty reception when he came to bat for the first time. "Buckey" Freeman received the giant's share of the applause, but Dowd and Foreman were by no means forgotten. Captain Collins and "Chick" Stahl were also given the glad hand. The bean-eating aggregaaccount of itself before the season is far advanced. Two of the new men, Parent and Ferris, made marked impressions on the spectators through good playing, but Jones, who relieved Hemphill in right field, lacks the earmarks of a first-class player. The team as a whole fielded beautifully. but at the bat it appeared weak, Collins Parent and Creiger doing most of the batting. Ferris whipped out a triple, but it was of the fluke order, the ball hit being away above his head as it crossed the

James Collins.

How the Runs Were Made.

It was almost the one-two-three order in Boston's first turn at the bat, Dowd flying out to right, Jones striking out and Stahl being caught at second in trying to steal after being sent to the initial bag on balls. Washington did much better, setting the spectators wild through a bombardment of hits which brought four tallies over the plate. Farrell started the business with a nice rap into center for a base, and then Forengan who was twirling for Boston hit Captain Everett a terrific blow with the ball on the leg and the latter limped to first. O'Brien then moved the runners up a base with a sacrifice and Dungan's double into left scored Farrell. Quinn innocently ambled up to the plate as though he intended favoring Foreman with a strike out, but, instead, met a swift outcurve on the end of the bat, and the last seen of the ball it was gracefully dropping into the big pond outside the left field fence. This ended the run getting for that inning, Clingman and Coughlin being easy outs from second to first.

Boston scored its first run in the second.

Parent hit for a single into left and Fer-ris' triple into right sent him over the plate. The Senators then combined and got that run back, Clarke reaching first on being hit by the pitcher and second as Creiger made a mess of Carrick's intended sacrifice. Farrell then hit into a double play, Carrick being the victim with himself, but Captain Everett selected one to his liking and scored Clarke with a timely

Neither side scored in the third, but in the fourth Boston hung up two runs. Af-ter Stahl had been killed off through a ter Stahl had been killed off through a pretty stop by Coughlin, Collins hit into deep left, and O'Brien dropped the ball as he stumbled into a rut, the latter taking second on the misplay. Freeman scored his captain with a wicked drive into center, and went to third a moment later when Carrick made a mess of Parent's grounder. Carrick hit Ferris, filling the bases, and Freeman came home as Creiger went out, second to first. Foreman made the third out, obligingly retiring on strikes the third out, obligingly retiring on strikes. One more, and the last, run came Boston's way in the fifth, after two were out. Stahl was given his base on balls, and he came all the way home on Collins' flerce drive into deep center for two bases.

Clinching the Victory. The score then stood 5 to 4 in favor of Washington, and the onlookers were getting a little nervous as the visitors kept ereeping up. But before the inning was over the nervousness disappeared and the game was safely tucked away in the records for Washington. Farrell was given his base on balls, and after Everett had fouled out to Freeman, O'Brien hit into right for a single. Farrell is something of a sprinter, and with the crack of the ball he started around the bases like the wind. The Boston players doubtless thought he would stop at third, but he kept on, caught Creiger off his guard and went over the plate like a flash. It was a daring piece of work, and its successful accomplishment was its reward. Dungan followed with a triple to left, scoring O'Brien, and with a triple to left, scoring O'Brien, and Quinn walked. Clingman's long fly to center sent Dungan over the plate, and Quinn, after stealing second, also scored when Coughlin hit into center for a single. This ended the run getting, goose eggs being marked up for both sides for the remaining innings of the game.

Umpire Cantillion's work was a big improvement over the day before, and he deserves credit for the way he handled the kicking players of both teams.

WOMEN'S WHIST CONGRESS OVER. Colonial Team of Philadelphia Won the Washington Trophy.

The Women's Whist League congress, which ended in New York last night, closed one of the most interesting exhibitions of card playing ever witnessed in that city. At one time during the congress there were 600 women playing whist at the same time, and so quietly that a pin dropped on the floor could have been heard.

The last day of the congress was the culmination of the long contests for the principal trophies and prizes.

The Brooklyn trophy finals fell to the lot of Mrs. Ward and Mrs. Leighton of Boston, plus 7; Mrs. Ditmars and Mrs. Goddard of Brooklyn, second, plus 6, and Miss Orrick and Miss Hopkins of Baltimore, who had qualified twice in the preliminary rounds, were third, with plus 4.

The Cavendish trophy feil to the lot of the Washington Whist Club. The final struggle for the Washington trophy was absorbing. Fifteen teams qualified, and it was decided that nothing less than forty-five deals would furnish a conclusive team. furnish a conclusive test of such an important event. The Colonial team of Philadelphia won with a match score of 9 out of a possible 14; the Belmont Club of the same city, second, while the Woman's Whist Club of Baltimore tied with the Englewood Club of New Jersey, with 8½ matches, thus finishing in fourth place, but a close runner for third honors.

MAY CARRY MORE MEN. American League Likely to Rescind

Its Fourteen Players' Rule. Owing to the war that has been declared and is being waged between the American and National Leagues, there is a possibility that the rule passed at the annual meeting of the former league, limiting each club to fourteen active players, may be rescinded. This action would only be taken as a war measure to insure putting the younger organization in such a position that it will be able to successfully cope with the National, and also owing to the general impression that the older league does not intend to abide by its rule, passed at its last annual meeting, limiting each club after

May 15 to sixteen men. Ban Johnson, president of the American League, has steadfastly maintained that the league would enforce the fourteen-men limit rule this year, putting it in operation two weeks after the opening of the regular scason, or May 8. Several of the magnates are opposed to this rule, now that the war has been declared and entered into, and have not been backward in manifesting their desire to make it a dead letter or re scind it entirely.

As a compromise, however, a rule may be adopted limiting the club to fifteen or six-selves in their decision as to what course they will take in this affair. They have un-til May 8 before President Johnson is called upon to issue an order enforcing the rule passed last fall, and it will then
